

A picture truly is worth a thousand words. When we take a photo, thousands of pixels that represent thousands of words all point back to one Word. Everything in creation points toward the Creator. A photo of the sky declares the glory of God. A photo of your cat proclaims the work of God's hands. A photo of your little sister reflects the image of God in which we all are created.

Visio divina, or “divine seeing,” is a practice that invites us to see God through images. Choose a favorite photo from your phone or from Sight Psalms, and spend some time with it. How does the image display God's glory? How is God speaking to you through the photo?

How might you display God's glory in a photograph?
